Clean Up The Cable Clutter And Keep Buyers In The Right Mood

To the seller it's invisible. To the buyer it's an ugly distraction.

Showing a clean uncluttered home to prospective buyers is a key element to closing a real estate sale. We all guide our clients to clean out the closets, organize basement and garage storage, and get rid of unnecessary clutter. An organized, clutter free home allows buyers to see themselves moving into a spacious and pleasant place to live.

But, there is one source of clutter we are so accustomed to that either we just don't see it or don't think it can be cleaned up. The culprit is cable clutter cascading off our desks or entertainment centers and spreading out all over the floor. The unsightly mass of cable clutter can often attract the attention of prospective buyers and distract them from absorbing the other positive features of the home.

There is a simple solution that makes it easy to get all the cable clutter up off the floor and out of direct view. It's called the Complete Cable Manager made by the Cable-Safe Company. The kit provides everything needed to lift every cable, hub, power adaptor and power strip off the floor. Once installed the floors are clear, uncluttered and easy to clean.

At $34.95, The Complete Cable Manager is an inexpensive quick fix to an unsightly problem. (It also make's a great gift for those "hard to buy for" relatives.) It is available online at cable-safe.com
